ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

On behalf of the members of the Fatherhood Coalition of Tarrant County and Workforce Solutions for Tarrant County, I would like to personally express my deepest appreciation to Yvette M. Wingate, Ed.D., with Tarrant County Public Health (TCPH). Dr. Wingate partnered with us to complete this updated version of the free Dad's Pocket Resource Guide, which was first introduced in 2005. TCPH provided assistance from the Health Equity and Community Engagement staff, Minority Health Specialist, Edrea Au, along with interns: Natalie Gore and Jennifer Villasana, who labored tirelessly to ensure that all information is comprehensive and accurate. Words are inadequate to fully communicate our gratitude for their countless hours of dedication to this project.

HISTORY OF THE FATHERHOOD COALITION OF TARRANT COUNTY

The vision for a fatherhood initiative in Tarrant County began largely in the context of an increased focus by state and national organizations on the role of fathers in the positive development and overall well-being of children. Social scientists and public policy makers were emphasizing negative behaviors in some children—academic failures, delinquency, and poor self-esteem—that could be correlated with father absence. In response, efforts were emerging to develop more resources to aggressively address factors that may contribute to father absence and lack of father involvement with their children—unemployment, low educational achievement, and skill deficiencies. In addition, welfare reform began broadening its outlook to consider strategies that might better address the adverse impacts of absent fathers on the emotional, social, and financial health of children.

In October 2000, the Tarrant County Workforce Development Board, now known as Workforce Solutions for Tarrant County (WSTC), began planning efforts to develop a county-wide initiative to promote responsible fatherhood and strengthen the role of fathers in the lives of children. WSTC invited community-based and social service organizations in Tarrant County to a series of public forums and discussions focusing on fathers and their children.

In November 2000, sixty Tarrant County service organizations attended an informational meeting hosted by Workforce Board staff and community leaders at Tarrant County College - South Campus. Committees were formed to develop strategies to address specific needs of four target populations of fathers—teen fathers, incarcerated fathers, fathers with the Office of the Attorney General child support orders, and “at-risk” fathers. An at-risk father was described as any father subject to being disconnected from his children, either physically, emotionally, and/or by lack of financial support.

In January 2001, a Fatherhood Advisory Task Force (FATF) was established to guide and develop a comprehensive fatherhood initiative.

In March 2001, TATF joined forces with a community-based effort under the leadership of Charles Scoma, then Mayor of North Richland Hills. This partnership led to hosting a community forum in conjunction with the Texas Fatherhood Initiative to engage additional partners. The community forum established the Fatherhood Coalition of Tarrant County (FCTC).

In June 2001, FCTC held the first annual “Celebrate Fatherhood” event and since then, has continued to promote responsible fatherhood every year.
